

Mixed reaction on Reagan candidacy by movie industry friends

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ronald Reagan's candidacy for president draws a mixed reaction from three people who started him on the road to fame.

"If he's nominated, I'd vote for him; but I don't think he should be nominated," says Joy Hodges, the actress who opened doors for her friend from Iowa.

"Sure, I'd vote for Ronnie," says William Meikeljohn, the agent who took the young sports announcer to Warner Brothers studio.

"Me, I'm a Democrat," says Maxwell Arnow, the studio executive who ordered a screen test for Reagan.

In separate interviews, the three recalled the events in 1937 that led to an acting contract for the man who later became governor of California and a presidential candidate.

Miss Hodges had been a child star on station WHO in Des Moines, became a band singer and movie actress and returned to her hometown to be interviewed by "Dutch" Reagan.

"What does it feel like to be a movie star?" he asked her.

"You may know one of these days," she replied to the handsome interviewer. When he went to California to cover the Chicago Cubs at spring training, he looked her up at the Biltmore Bowl, where she was singing.

"He said he wanted to visit a movie studio," said Miss Hodges by telephone. "Then he admitted, 'If you really want to know, I'd like to get a screen test.'

"He was very presentable and had a marvelous gift of gab. I said, 'Stand up and take off your glasses.' Then I told him maybe I can do something about it."

She sent him to see agent Meikeljohn, who arranged for an appointment with Arnow, talent head at Warners.

"At five o'clock he came to my office," Arnow recalled. "I liked him immediately. He had a great smile and a warm handshake. A very nice person, still is. I asked him if he would like to make a test. He said he couldn't because he had to catch a train with the Cubs.

"I'll get you on it," I said."

Arnow said he held a crew after the 6 o'clock finish on a movie set to film the test. Reagan then caught the train back to Iowa. In his autobiography, "Where's the Rest of Me?" he tells of receiving a telegram from Meikeljohn: "Warner's offer contract seven years, one year's options, starting at $200 a week. What shall I do?"

Reagan's reply: "Sign before they change their minds."

Meikeljohn, who also was the agent for Reagan's wives, Jane Wyman and Nancy Davis, called Reagan "one of the most honest men I've ever known. He was a straight shooter with no bad habits, always arrived on the set on time, knew his lines and everyone else's."

Miss Hodges lives in Kato-nah, N.Y., and is active with lectures and stage appearances.

"I don't think Ronnie is ready to be president," she remarked. "But I have written him that if his candidacy doesn't come off, he has still done a wonderful thing for the country in stirring comment on the issues. I think he has earned his niche in history."

Manipulating monetary policy to buy votes for Ford: Meany

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Meany, in a speech he was unable to deliver and which was subsequently "cleansed" by steelworkers boss I.W. Abel, says Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns has manipulated monetary policy to "buy votes" for President Ford.

The AFL-CIO president has the flu and his speech Friday night was read by Abel, who deleted all remarks critical of Burns and Arthur Greenspan, chairman of President Ford's Council of Economic Advisers.

Burns and Greenspan were in the audience at a dinner celebrating the 30th anniversary of the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

The dinner also was designed to promote a Democratic proposal to achieve "full employment" by using federal and private resources to bring the jobless rate down to 3 per cent within four years. Unemployment is now 7.6 per cent.

An AFL-CIO spokesman said Meany stands by the excised remarks in which he did a bit of politicking of his own, accusing Burns of "election-year economic witchcraft."

Meany said Greenspan is a proponent of high unemployment, and added: "The only time he has ever expressed sincere concern about the plight of the unemployed was when he was talking about unemployed stock brokers."

Meany said Burns has eased up on the Federal Reserve's tight-money, high interest rate policies to boost business temporarily.

"Burns is doing what he did in 1972 — making temporary adjustments to make the economy appear healthier than it is," Meany said.

"And if he is successful in buying votes for the President, then he'll tighten the screws again, as he did in 1973, and the economy will head into another tailspin before it has recovered from the present one," he said.

Abel, president of the United Steelworkers union, did not delete Meany's remarks about unemployment.

"Anyone who claims that this economy is healthy — when it has 7.1 million official unemployed and another million so discouraged they've given up hope," he said.

Earlier in the day, at a congressional conference on full employment, Greenspan called the full employment bill "unworkable," and said it would do more harm than good to the economy.

Burns said he could accept the federal government as the "employer of last resort," but only after all other measures had failed. Even then, he said the jobs created should be so poorly paid and disagreeable that those taking them would be encouraged to find permanent jobs elsewhere.

Meany called the bill sound legislation and said when it is passed, "Congress must force the administration to take firm measures to implement the law and achieve full employment."

"The past seven years are proof that Congress can not rely on the good judgment and good will of a president to properly administer the law when America has a President who has neither," Meany said.

Ford says he doesn't care if Reagan quits

By DAVID R. NELSEN
Associated Press Writer

President Ford began a day-long campaign swing through North Carolina today by declaring he doesn't care if Ronald Reagan abandons his bid for the Republican presidential nomination. On the Democratic side, Jimmy Carter predicted he will win Tuesday's primary here.

The President was asked about Reagan continuing his quest for the GOP nomination as he arrived in Charlotte for a breakfast meeting with supporters and a speech to the Future Homemakers of America.

"I don't really care," he replied.

Ford also planned stops in Asheville, Spruce Pine and Hickory.

Meanwhile, Democratic front-runner Carter left the state Friday with the prediction he would win his party's balloting.

Reagan, the former California governor, spent a good part of the week in North Carolina waving off forecasts that his challenge to Ford was near an end.

Trying to reverse early primary losses, Reagan scheduled campaign stops today in North Wilkesboro, Kinston and Asheville.

There was other activity on the political front today:

—Gov. David Boren sought support for Carter as Oklahoma's Democrats prepared today to pick 28 of the 37 delegates the state will send to the national nominating convention.

Boren announced his support for Carter Thursday, predicting the ex-Governor would win a majority of the delegates.

—Delegates to the National Black Political Assembly, meeting in Cincinnati, awaited word today from U.S. Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., their choice to head an independent presidential campaign.

Dellums refused to comment on the nomination by the assembly's executive council, but said he would inform the 3,000 delegates of his decision on whether to accept in a speech today.

—Carter, Wallace and Jackson were to learn how many delegates they will get from the March 9 Democratic primary in Florida.

The state party's rules committee makes the official apportionment of Florida's 81 convention delegates based on an accountant's application of certified election returns.

Greg Farmer, the party's executive director, said Friday that the official breakdown may differ from calculations made by the candidates themselves or the news media. But he acknowledged the National Election Service breakdown of 34 delegates for Carter, 26 for Wallace and 21 for Jackson was "pretty accurate."

Confident of his strength in North Carolina, Carter campaigned only two days during the final week while Wallace, his principal opponent, arrived in the state Tuesday and was to continue seeking votes up to election day.

Carter, in his speeches, made little mention of Wallace. But Wallace blasted away at Carter, accusing him of lying and changing his stand on issues.

Traveling between Wilmington and Raleigh, Carter did mention to several reporters that he may not oppose Wallace in Alabama in May, when Democrats there choose their national convention delegates.

Carter said he doesn't want to "rub his nose in it any further."

Wallace finished ahead of Carter in Massachusetts' primary, but since then Carter has won in Florida and Illinois.

Wallace, meanwhile, continued his attack on Carter's credibility. During a speech in Winston-Salem, Wallace produced a copy of an Atlanta Journal article of June 1970 quoting Carter as saying he would support a national ticket of Sen. Hubert Humphrey and Wallace.

The Alabama governor said Carter claims now he never supported Wallace. He told the crowd the article was proof of the former Georgia governor's duplicity.

In Raleigh, Carter said he vaguely remembered telling a reporter that a Humphrey-Wallace ticket would be popular in the South, but added, "I never supported Wallace and I never will."

Reagan's already staggering candidacy took another blow Friday when North Carolina Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr., a Ford supporter, said he and eight other GOP governors had called on the former California governor to withdraw from the race for the good of the party.

He said the others joining him in the call were Govs. Daniel Evans of Washington, Robert Bennett of Kansas, Mills Godwin of Virginia, Arch Moore of West Virginia, Otis Bowen of Indiana, William J. Milliken of Michigan, Robert Ray of Iowa, and Jay Hammond of Alaska.

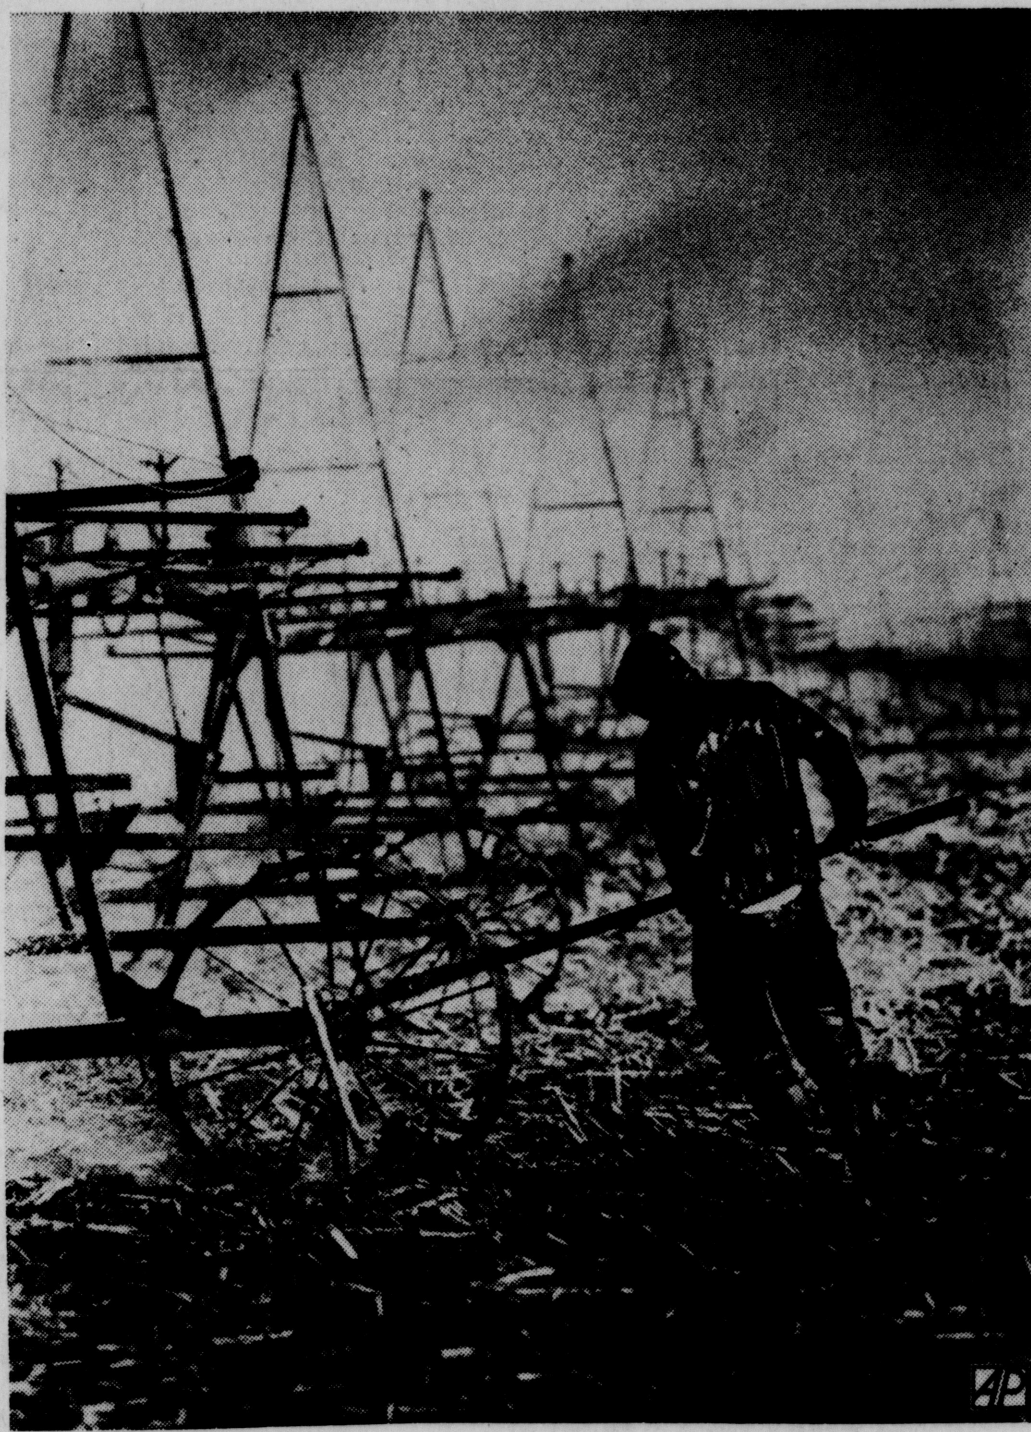

Bennett, Ray and Bowen later said they had not agreed to join the call, and Reagan dismissed the call as a campaign ploy and insisted his campaign was in good shape.

"Only about one ninth of the delegates have now been decided in the primaries," he said. "That makes it about the first inning."

Ford, in an interview, didn't call on Reagan to drop out of the race, but he did say the longer they continue their primary battles, the more likely it becomes they will spawn party divisions that could hurt the GOP in the general election.

Reagan, however, planned a last-minute television blitz to avoid a sixth straight primary loss to Ford, aides said.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., chairman of the national Citizens for Reagan organization, said, "We felt we needed the media. That's why we were having this blitz."

Assets of oil firm seized

SPRINGFIELD — The Illinois Department of Revenue has ordered the seizure of assets of a major oil distributor in Evergreen Park for the collection of more than $620,000 in delinquent motor fuel taxes, interest, and penalties, according to State Revenue Director Robert H. Alphin.

The warrant, issued to the office of the Cook County sheriff, ordered the seizure of property of the Danny Boy Oil Co., 2917 W. 95th St., Evergreen Park. The company is owned by Dan Terzakos of Evergreen Park.

Alphin said the warrant covered $628,441.63 in taxes, interest, and penalties owed for the period between May through December 1975.

The motor fuel tax, imposed at a rate of 7½ cents per gallon of fuel used by vehicles in Illinois, is paid by fuel distributors and suppliers, who collect it from their customers.

The seizure provision was written into the motor fuel tax law last year.

Alphin said the revenue department in early February revoked the oil company's distributor's license. The effect of the action requires the company now to pay the taxes directly to its fuel supplier.

Three children perish in fire near Paw Paw

PAW PAW — Three children died in a fire which destroyed their home Friday night.

The Paw Paw Fire Department responded to a call at 8:15 p.m. to the George Hyde farm near Rollo. When firemen arrived at the scene they found the small tenant house totally in flames. The children's father, Kenneth Clowers, 30; their mother, Jean, 23, and two cousins, Kristy and Tony Pettegger, ages 3 and 15, escaped the fire. They were taken to Sand-wich Community Hospital where they are in satisfactory condition.

Dead are the Clowers children, Brian, 3; Kenneth, 4, and Cheryl, 7.

The cause of the fire was undetermined and is under investigation by the Paw Paw Fire Department, DeKalb County Police, and the state fire marshal.

Funeral arrangements for the children are pending at Torman Funeral Home, Eastville.

Wildcat strike causing Panama Canal traffic jam

BALBOA, Panama Canal Zone (AP) — More than 130 ships swung on anchors waiting to cross the Panama Canal today in one of the shipping's largest traffic jams ever, the result of a wildcat strike by three unions. U.S. officials sought to end the strike with a temporary restraining order.

The Pentagon in Washington said that "as a last resort" it was sending 35 military ship pilots to the Canal Zone to be used if necessary to move the ships through the 50-mile waterway which connects the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

The pilots were drawn from the Coast Guard, Navy and Army transportation corps, and are qualified for the duties, the Pentagon said.

Officials of the U.S. government-owned Panama Canal Co.

sought the temporary restraining order from the U.S. district court in the Canal Zone on Friday, alleging that members of the unions, most of them Americans, were violating U.S. laws against strikes by government personnel.

The unions represent pilots, tugboat captains and teachers, who have forced schools to close.

The court said after granting the order that it would hold a hearing Monday to determine if a permanent injunction should be ordered.

Union leaders made no immediate public response to the court action or Pentagon decision.

At least 408 employees, most of them Americans and in key pilot or tugboat positions, reported sick Friday, continuing a job action that began last Sunday. The pilots rejected a settlement proposed by Canal Zone Gov. Harold R. Parfitt on Friday.

No ship can pass through the canal without a pilot. Only six pilots worked Friday and five ships cleared the canal. Normal volume is 30-35 ships per day. Ships were backed up as far as 10 miles at sea.

The stoppage is costing the ships from $2,000 to $40,000 each per day and could be much higher for ships carrying perishable cargo. Some shippers were already diverting vessels to other ports or sending them on the expensive trip around Cape Horn.

The canal company seeks to reduce a $14 million operating deficit this year with new wage proposals.

Recovery too consumer based?

WASHINGTON (LENS)—Wall Street's surge in the Dow Jones index to touch 1,000 is the most dramatic, but not the most important, indication that the American economy is recovering well from its recession—better indeed than the economic advisers to the Ford administration had believed.

The boom in prices, and business, on Wall Street reflects the forecast that the country's GNP will grow about 6.5 per cent in real terms this year. This is a pace that is unlikely to reignite inflation but will certainly produce some uncommonly good corporate profits.

The Republican administration may be buoyed by the stock market's turn of speed but its greater delight is the rate at which unemployment is coming down. Last month it dropped to 7.6 per cent. That still means about 7 million people out of work but it is a steep decline from the 8.5 per cent unemployment rate of only two months ago.

More encouraging, the number of people in jobs has never been higher at 86.3 million, but the national labor force is still growing rapidly, particularly as more women are looking for work; so unemployment is likely to remain high.

As the economy gathers speed, those in jobs are working longer hours and getting thicker pay packets. It is their spending that is now fuelling the recovery. Retail trade is running very much higher than it did a year ago. The public is catching up on the things it sacrificed during the long months of recession: car sales, for example, are 10 per cent up on last year's, with a return in popularity of America's traditional big and expensive models.

The public is also starting to feel happy enough about the future to get back into the housing market. The number of new houses being built had dropped to less than one million a year at the depth of the recession; it is now slowly climbing again.

All this has led a confident President Ford to talk of a "new prosperity." "Every week we are hearing more and more good economic news," he said in Washington last week. "These figures are not political fiction; they are economic facts." That may be true but will the recovery last if it is supported solely by a consumer spree?

Business investment has been much more slow to pick up. Capital spending is expected to climb by only about 6 per cent this year as factories still have large reserves of unused capacity. New orders are coming in (they were 1.9 per cent higher in January than in December), but these are being met with longer working hours and more employees and not by any rush to investment.

Many manufacturers are likely to hold off ordering new plant additions until the end of the year when they will need to be making judgments about the levels of demand in 1978 and beyond. The market surplus in men, and machinery, and the gains in productivity now being made are a double-edged sword: they allow ample scope for continued growth in the economy but they also mean that the capital investment which will be needed to keep the recovery going will be made only slowly and perhaps too slowly.

Professor puts down reporter

By TOM TIEDE
WASHINGTON (NEA)—I met Mike Mansfield a decade ago in a hotel room in Helena, Mont. He was the state's senior senator on a visit to home. I blew in on a reporting assignment. A mutual friend offered an introduction and I seized the opportunity for narrow reasons: It was the time of Vietnam, which I then embraced, and I wanted to argue Mansfield's anti-war views.

The door to the senator's room was open, and he was waiting for me in shirtsleeves on the edge of the bed. I was offered the only chair in the room. He lit a pipe, crossed his arms over his chest and explained that the small, plain, very ugly room was adequate for his stay. He didn't like suites, he said. He had no entourage. His needs were simple. Saying this, which was a lot for him, he retreated behind an expression of solemnity, and listened while I explained my concern for his Vietnam opposition.

I said that I had seen a great deal of the combat as a correspondent and was worried that the increasing lack of support for it in America might eventually place U.S. soldiers in jeopardy. I was overly blunt, one might even say insufferable. I said I had seen enemy leaflets quoting George McGovern's condemnation of the war, and had talked with men in the ranks who were becoming confused with the similar remarks being made by Mansfield. Naturally, I added that such talk here could only encourage the enemy and prolong events.

"Have you been in Vietnam?" I asked.

"Not recently," he said. "Then how can you judge it at all?"

I learned later of course that my equating his ignorance of Southeast Asia with his lack of experience was not only naive but in error. Mansfield had been a lifelong scholar on Asian affairs, a university instructor in such before becoming a lawmaker, a man whose Far Eastern knowledge was thought so valuable that Franklin Roosevelt sent him there on a strategic war mission in the 1940s.

Mansfield said none of this, by the way. For much of our conversation, actually, he said very little of anything. He nodded. He shook his head. He said "yes" or "no" where applicable. I suppose I took his simple reticence as a weakness, as have many over his 34 years in public life (10 as a congressman, 24 as a senator, 15 as the majority leader). His lack of dynamism has been a Washington issue for decades. Colleagues have for years urged him to come alive, to which his response has been: "I am not a ringmaster."

He certainly isn't. Born 72 years ago in Manhattan, sent to Montana to be reared by in-laws, a one-time runaway who joined the Navy at age 14 and a former mine worker who became a college professor, Mansfield is merely Mansfield, which is quite enough. He is perhaps as fine a politician as this nation can hope to produce. Gentle, generous, honest, he is an elected official who serves the public rather than himself. He has never had a press secretary, reads every piece of constituent mail, and works 12-14 hour days. A rare officer indeed.

And now that he has announced his retirement, I'm reminded of his finest quality. That day in the hotel room he let me speak as if I had something to say. I was there for an hour or more, a crusading zealot, before the talk closed. In the end he said that if the United States stopped in Vietnam, the suffering would stop. Then he said he had a great deal of respect for the military except when it was wrong. His pipe was empty. We shook hands. I left.

Downstairs in the lobby the mutual friend asked how the interview went. I said it was disappointing. How so? Well, it was frustrating, I said, "I couldn't get through to the old man at all."

Mike Mansfield will leave the Senate at the completion of this term. He has been in the body for one-sixth of the nation's history since independence. He has served longer as majority leader than any other man. Of all that he has been, however, I will remember him most, and most humbly, for his ability to suffer fools.

Congress looks for new leaders

WASHINGTON (LENS)—When the next congress convenes in January, the Democrats will still be the majority, and both parties will have to elect new leaders.

Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, the minority leader since 1969, announced his impending retirement from the Senate in December. Mike Mansfield of Montana, the leader of the Democratic majority, made it known that he, too, had decided not to seek re-election. "There is a time to stay and a time to go," said Mansfield, pointing out that this was his 34th year in Congress.

That length of tenure is by no means a record; Rep. Wright Patman (D-Tex.), the scourge of bankers, died at 82 after representing his native town of Texarkana for 47 years in the House of Representatives. Mansfield's historical feat is to have been majority leader of the Senate longer than anybody else; he took Lyndon Johnson's place in 1961 when Johnson became vice president.

Johnson was what is called a "strong" Senate leader, perhaps the strongest there has ever been. He led the Democratic majority in the Senate at a time when the President, Eisenhower, was a Republican; the demand for strong congressional leadership is generally greater when Congress and the White House are in opposite party hands.

When Mansfield took over, a Democratic president, John Kennedy, was coming in and the Senate majority had no reason to want a self-assertive man. It wanted somebody to manage its parliamentary business, and this Mansfield proceeded to do in his self-effacing, conscientious, taciturn, civil way.

By DON OAKLEY

An American back from a sojourn abroad minces no words in describing his impression of American television.

"There is scarcely an adjective of denigration that cannot be mustered to assault it," says Robert MacNeil. "It is trivial, mindless, blatant, mawkish, vulgar, strident. Yet it is enormously successful."

MacNeil is anchorman for the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) program, the "MacNeil Report."

"Network television," he says, "is an amazing cultural phenomenon, binding together this vast nation like nothing else, giving tens of millions of people at night a sense of shared experience and national community, nourishing its fantasies, manipulating its very identity as a people, with no greater purpose in mind than to sell it more deodorant."

Whatever can be contrived to serve that purpose more efficiently is what passes for entertainment on the air, he continues. The dynamics of such a system require audience maximization and programs designed to appeal to the lowest common denominator of taste. Minority tastes, even when held by millions of people, "are cavalierly ignored"—with the exception of the still-fledgling PBS.

As for the claim by television moguls that they are only giving the people what they want, this is

Opticians eye advertising

A new rule proposed by the Federal Trade Commission could affect everyone who wears glasses or contact lenses. It would allow optometrists (physicians specializing in eye care), optometrists (nondentists trained to test vision) and opticians (people who make and sell glasses but who aren't licensed to examine eyes) to advertise the prices of their services. Most state and local laws, as well as professional codes of ethics, now restrain such advertising.

According to the FTC and supporters of the new rule, advertising would result in greater competition and hence lower prices for eye care for consumers, especially low-income families who need glasses but can't afford them. They point out that the rule change would not force eye care specialists to advertise or give out information about prices but only permit them to do so if they wished.

Opponents object that advertising would be demeaning to eye care professionals, could result in lower quality goods and services and could lead to such undesirable consequences as bait and switch tactics by irresponsible people.

The view of the FTC, however, seems to be that there are more advantages than disadvantages in the new rule.

Eight years later the position changed again, the White House got Richard Nixon, and congress found itself first having to defend itself against encroaching executive power, and then struggling to reassert itself and recover ground that had long been lost. Mansfield got a self-assertive deputy, Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia. Byrd will now be a candidate for the leadership, but there will be other candidates claiming to be more representative of the Democratic mainstream than the relatively conservative Byrd.

Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine, whose presidential aspirations were disposed of in 1972, lost no time in announcing his desire for the position. Sen. Alan Cranston of California, who is habitually busy organizing the liberal vote in the senate, may enter the competition. But what about Sen. Hubert Humphrey, who was Democratic whip (that is, Mansfield's deputy), and a vigorous, ebullient one at that, in the early 1960s until he went on to be Lyndon Johnson's vice president?

Humphrey cannot know until June or July whether he will be called upon to be Democratic presidential candidate. If he is not then he may want to crown his career with the Senate leadership, and as a candidate for that he would be a hard man to beat.

Leading a minority is less of a glittering prize than leading a majority; still, as the all but permanent minority in both houses of Congress the Republican politicians are permanently short of alluring positions (specifically, committee chairmanships) to compete for. Sen. Scott's present deputy, Sen. Robert Griffin of Michigan, a moderate, unspectacular man, will probably face a vigorous, shrewd challenger, Sen. John Tower of Texas, who, without being an extremist, does stand rather on the right of the Republican party. The Republican liberals, a minority within a minority, to whom Scott has been sympathetic if fallible leader, may produce a candidate of their own, whose main effect may be to improve Tower's chances at the expense of Griffin.

Desirable as these congressional leadership positions, with their prestige and their perquisites, undoubtedly are, the intriguing thing is that their real importance cannot be assessed until the outcome of the presidential contest is known. Being Republican, albeit minority, leader in the House of Representatives or the Senate has more appeal when the minority leader can at least expect to be, on occasion, the president's parliamentary spokesman.

On its side, the majority does not necessarily want the same qualities in its leader when its party also commands the White House as when the two branches are in opposite party hands. In the House, for instance, the Democrats feel the need for a "strong" Speaker to lead and organize the Democratic majority so that it may stand up to a Republican president with more success (in domestic policy, at any rate) than it has been doing. There is grumbling against the present Speaker, Carl Albert, and almost an expectation that he, too, will decide to retire between now and July 7, the last day when he can put his name on the ballot in Oklahoma.

TV should be reformed in marketplace true, says MacNeil, because people are unaware of what they might want if given the choice. By contrast, British television has a long list of programs never seen in the United States, such as on gardening, chess, pool, antiques, creative arts and a much wider range of minority sports.

Well, it has never been easy to defend the standards of American television, and it is especially difficult in light of current offerings. Yet there has always been an element of snobism or elitism in such broad-brushed attacks as MacNeil's against the medium.

Even in this year's sorry season there have been programs—perhaps not as many as there could be or should be, but more than a few, nevertheless—that have been informative, enlightening, even uplifting, if a viewer took the trouble to search them out.

But what critics like MacNeil are actually objecting to is not that the masses are being spooned a diet of entertainment by the medium but that the diet is not up to their cultivated tastes. In a way, they are demanding that they, too, be spooned around the clock and be spared the necessity of exercising a selectivity and discernment.

Many of these critics, moreover, don't even support the small amount of programming that aims at a cut above the usual fare. PBS stations, for example, which depend so heavily on British productions MacNeil cites as examples of what television could do, are forced to come every year with begging bowl in hand asking for donations from the public.

As MacNeil points out, when radio first appeared in the 1920s, in Britain "it was in the natural order of things to have a decision made paternalistically, at the center, for the 'establishment' of the day to feel it knew best what was good for the masses. Out of such attitudes grew the BBC."

The United States, for better or worse, opted for a form of marketplace democracy in radio, and later in television.

"There is no doubt in my mind," says MacNeil, "about which people got the better deal."

He may be right, although we would like to hear the opinion of the average viewer in Britain, where since 1955 commercial television has been restricted to one of the three national channels yet seems to be thriving and, as MacNeil himself says, rescued the BBC from stuffy complacency.

Perhaps public television, or cable television, or something, may yet rescue American commercial television from its own complacency. It is not, however, something that anyone can ordain.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Actress Sue Lyon says she wants out of her three-year-long marriage to convict Gary D. Adamson.

"I've had it," she told a reporter who acted as a go-between after jail officials refused to allow her to talk to Adamson by telephone.

Adamson is being held in Marion County Jail on bank robbery charges. The Indiana native escaped Feb. 28 from the Colorado State Hospital at Pueblo where he was undergoing treatment for a drug problem. He was arrested March 9 after the robbery of an Indianapolis bank.

Miss Lyon, 29, who skyrocketed to stardom for her portrayal of Lolita in that movie 15 years ago, married Adamson in 1973 in a prison ceremony. In 1974, she filed for divorce and then withdrew the suit. Except for his escape, Adamson has not been out of custody since he and Miss Lyon were married.

"Tell her I love her and that everything is not as bad as it looks," Adamson told a reporter.

er Thursday.

Miss Lyon, working on a film in Los Angeles, said she's waiting to hear from her attorney before deciding on a divorce or a separation.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Retired actor John Carroll, who played "Zorro," the Spanish Robin Hood, in silent films, has been fined $100 after a jury found him guilty of fleeing and eluding police.

Carroll, 70, also was charged with driving without a valid license in the Jan. 2 incident.

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) — Nearly two-thirds of the Dutch people do not believe Prince Bernhard when he says he never received money from Lockheed Aircraft Corp., according to an opinion poll published by a Dutch magazine.

The poll was conducted earlier this month for Panorama magazine by the Dutch Institute for Public Opinion. Just 30 per cent of the 886 persons questioned accepted the Prince's denial. A total of 96 per cent were familiar with the Lockheed bribes scandal.

U.S. Senate subcommittee hearings earlier this year disclosed that bribes totaling $1.1 million were paid by Lockheed to a high-ranking Dutchman to promote sales of its aircraft in The Netherlands. The Dutch government last month identified Prince Bernhard as the person named in the Senate testimony but said this did not necessarily mean that he actually received any Lockheed money.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — State Sen. Fred Berry came close to being designated the senate's official fossil for a few minutes, but he apparently did not care for the designation.

Berry, 63, offered a bill Thursday to name an official state fossil, an official rock and an official gem.

Since the bill was offered late in the legislative session, often a time for lighter moments, the bill was amended by voice vote to make Berry, a Knoxville Republican, the state's official fossil.

Berry withdrew the bill.

Daley strikes out with Chicago's black voters

CHICAGO (AP) — Mayor Richard J. Daley crowded over his Illinois primary victories, including the whipping of a rebellious Democratic governor and a collection of delegates that he hopes will make him a Democratic convention kingmaker. But there's a flaw.

Along Cottage Grove Avenue on the city's South Side, anti-Daley blacks are exhilarated over their success in beating "the boss downtown" and saving the career of U.S. Rep. Ralph H. Metcalfe, a key target on the mayor's political hit list in the Illinois primary Tuesday.

Metcalfe, once a Daley vassal but no more, trounced his Democratic primary foe, anti-poverty administrator Erwin France, and should have no problem returning to Congress. Political goals in the black community are soaring after the breakdown of Daley's patronage-fueled precinct army in the South Side 1st District congressional race.

"We have our eye not only on the governorship but on aldermanic races and the mayoralty," attorney Thomas N. Todd, Metcalfe's campaign chairman, said in an interview Thursday. "We turned a campaign for Congress into a movement for Congress. We articulated the issues of liberation and throwing off oppression, the way Martin Luther King did when he went into the South and articulated the issue of throwing off Jim Crow."

Daley, his machine often bolstered by a big black vote and his own political hide saved by the South Side when Republican Benjamin Adamowski almost beat him in 1963, minimizes the Metcalfe victory.

"We won the big game," Daley said, referring to the primary victory of his candidate, Michael J. Howlett, for the nomination for governor over incumbent Daniel Walker. "The other was just a little game on the side."

State Senate President Cecil A. Partee, a South Side ward committeeman and Daley's candidate for Illinois attorney general, says the primary was "a rather special kind of election." He says the results show no long-term loss for the mayor's forces among black voters. "Ralph Metcalfe has been in this community for a long time," Partee said. "He got into something of a confrontation with the mayor. A black candidate for mayor in 1979? I don't read it that far ahead. Another problem we had was that there were so many candidates on the ticket that voters got confused."

Todd says that the "prospects for a black candidate for mayor or in 1979 are excellent." "We have the people now, technically trained people, young lawyers, students, middle income people. Now we have to send some people into the pits, into the trenches."

Democratic state Sen. Richard Newhouse, long an independent voice from the South Side, says flatly: "There will be a black candidate for mayor. I intend to be around to see that there is."

Newhouse, with a weak organization, ran third in the 1975 Democratic mayoral primary, behind Daley and attorney William Singer. But in that race he finished ahead of Edward V. Hanrahan, a one-time powerhouse of the Irish-dominated machine who was dumped when he lost black support for his role in the 1969 shooting of Black Panther leader Fred Hampton.

Hanrahan won the Democratic nomination for a second term as Cook County state's attorney despite machine opposition but lost the election as normally Democratic black wards went heavily for Republican Bernard Carey.

"We defeated Hanrahan," says Todd, who resigned as an assistant U.S. district attorney in the furor over the Hampton case. "But what did we get out of it? Nothing. I got a professorship at Northwestern. But the black community got nothing. We elected Bernard Carey, but he didn't make us any promises."

The Metcalfe campaign was transformed into a movement, Todd said, partly because 13 of the 17 members of the congressional Black Caucus helped round up votes.

Sad conditions for mentally ill revealed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new government report says some mentally ill patients in private nursing homes are living with hunger, cockroaches, leaking roofs, exposed electrical wires and doors made of cardboard and burlap.

The report, released today by the Senate subcommittee on long-term care and programs, particularly scrutinized New York and Illinois. Senate investigators said private homes were found wanting in both states.

Sen. Frank E. Moss, D-Utah, chairman of the panel, said the conditions were fostered by government policy that provides a financial incentive to move patients from public institutions into private-care facilities.

"I have seen hungry people with their faces up against vending machines begging for a quarter," Moss said. "I saw three patients cooking eggs on a hotplate in their room while breakfast was being served in the dining room. I learned that they had bought the eggs with money they had received from begging."

Moss claimed mental patients "are a good investment" in New York as well as in Illinois.

He offered case histories of several private operations, including one in Illinois where the operator housed 180 mental patients who were transferred from public care facilities. The operator received $400,000 a year and managed to keep $185,000 as profit. Moss said the operator spent only 54 cents per patient per day for food. "He (the operator) defended this profit, telling us it was below industry expectations," Moss said.

Moss laid part of the blame on Congress and the Social Security Act, including the Supplemental Security Income program.

In 1935, when it approved Social Security, Moss said, Congress barred Social Security funds for residents of public institutions. But if boarded in a private home they could receive the money.

"In short, Congress created the scandal-ridden, for-profit nursing home industry," he said.

In this same way, Moss continued, Congress barred receipt of SSI funds by individuals in public institutions and cut SSI funds by a third for individuals under the care of and living with relatives.

The result, Moss said, was an incentive to leave public institutions for private-care facilities. The same law provided financial incentive for states to move patients into private homes, transferring the cost of caring for a patient to the federal level.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

John Honeyman, a professional Tory, was in fact Washington's agent, leading a double life as a beef supplier to the British troops. A few days before Christmas, 1776, Honeyman contrived to be captured by patriots and taken before the general. Alone together, Honeyman reported on the Hessians garrisoned at Trenton without fortifications. Honeyman was jailed to protect his cover, but "mysteriously" escaped during the night. Washington used Honeyman's information to attack the Hessians on Dec. 26, 1776. The World Almanac recalls.

The Doctor Says:

Diarrhea victim advised to stop all caffeine

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I have had diarrhea off and on for eight years. The tests show a spastic colon. I am bones because nothing stays in me. I am a highly nervous person but I have diarrhea even if my nerves are relaxed. They have treated me with different things but it doesn't work. I have sharp pains and burning and fluttering throughout my intestines. Can you please advise me? I am only 35 but feel like 99 most of the time.

DEAR READER — Stop coffee in all forms, including the decaffeinated type. Do not use tea, colas or other caffeine containing beverages. Temporarily you might avoid all forms of soda beverages. Not because they contain soda but because some of them that you might not suspect contain caffeine that may stimulate the nervous system. Stop smoking cigarettes if you use any at all.

Do start eating bulk-containing foods, particularly those containing bran. These are the whole wheat products. You can use All Bran, bran buds or any other sources of whole wheat fiber that you can get. Shredded wheat products are also whole wheat. Keep in mind that you may have gas and symptoms for the first two to three weeks when you increase the cereal fiber in your diet. You may need to do this gradually to keep from causing too many symptoms.

Stop all milk and milk products and do not use foods that use any appreciable amounts of milk in their preparation such as milk gravies, cream pies, ice cream and milk — containing sherbets.

After following this regime for a while if your situation straightens out you can try milk products and see if you are able to tolerate them. If you are you could add them back to your normal diet so you will be getting enough calcium. These simple points listed above will go a long way toward helping many people who have the spastic colon problem.

Diarrhea often is part of the problem of an irritable colon. DEAR DR. LAMB — Can you please give me information on dextrocardia with situs inversus. Is it true that the heart on the right side is weaker and that the child usually dies at birth?

DEAR READER — Negative. All that diagnosis means is that the internal organs of the body are arranged in a mirror image of the normal arrangement. That is, the things that are supposed to be on the right side are on the left side and vice versa. This can be the only abnormality with a perfectly normal heart and normal abdominal organs. Such individuals may live a perfectly normal life span.

Sometimes when this variation occurs there will be accompanying birth defects. If there are, whether or not they will affect the health of the individual depends on what defects are present and how serious these defects are. If it is an ordinary garden variety type of heart defect that can be completely corrected with a simple operation then the outlook is usually good.

A new era in home climate control begins

About forty-five years ago, scientists began developing a revolutionary heating device that uses the heat of the earth's atmosphere. They called it a heat pump. Today, it is the only commercially available heating system that provides an answer to shrinking supplies of fuel oil and gas.

How the heat pump works.

Basically, the heat pump moves heat from one place to another. Using electricity to run the device, it extracts heat from a limitless source—the heat in outdoor air. During winter, enough heat remains in the air—even on the coldest and cloudiest days—to be extracted by the pump and transferred indoors as clean, flameless heat. And during warm weather, the process automatically reverses, removing excess indoor heat and humidity—like an air conditioner.

Better efficiency.

In short, the heat pump does the job of both a furnace and an air conditioner. But there's an important difference. The heat pump produces more than 1½ units of heat energy for every unit it consumes. That's better efficiency than any other current heating system.

It's ready.

It's ideal for new homes because it won't be obsolete in ten years. It's not dependent on the fossil fuels that may not be available in the future. To the homeowner, that means significant long-term savings on heating costs.

The heat pump is a big step in the conservation of scarce fuels. And here in northern Illinois, the electricity you would use to capture the heat comes mainly from coal and nuclear energy, rather than scarce oil and gas.

To get the full advantages of the heat pump, it's important to get a quality product, properly installed and reliably serviced. For the name of qualified installers in your area, call G. A. Larson Co. (Westinghouse Distrib.), (815) 963-0471, or General Electric Co., (312) 496-6356. Don't compare twins says Ann, who is one

Dear Ann: Ha! I finally gotcha! I've been waiting a long time to nail you and today was the day. I refer to your reply to the mother of identical twins.

Since I am the mother of identical twins, I consider myself something of an expert. I never felt that strangers who stopped me on the street were "picking my kids to pieces." They were admiring and congratulating me for having been the recipient of a rare gift from God. You should have told her to be proud that people cared enough to look for identifying characteristics. She ought to love every minute of it. All too soon her twins will be grown and she'll miss the glorious days when she took them out and showed them off.—New Orleans

Dear N.O.: You may be the mother of identical twins, but I AM an identical twin and can report first-hand what it's like to be victimized by well-meaning strangers who are constantly examining twins for "differences" and verbalizing their "discoveries."

It's hard on the twin who doesn't have the dimples or the prettier head of hair, or the one who's slightly plumper. I felt "fat" as a child (although I wasn't really) because my twin was smaller. This is what comparisons by strangers can do.

My original advice still stands. The mother of twins should permit NO comparisons whatever. Someone always suffers.

The next letter makes the point far better than I. Please read it.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 15 years old and an "identical twin," which is what a lot of ignorant people call us even though my sister and I are not identical at all. If those gawkers would only take the time to look at us they would see many differences. We look a lot alike but we aren't carbon copies of each other.

I was glad when you told off the mother of twins who let her children get picked to pieces by strangers on the street. (Sometimes relatives do the same thing and I believe they should be told off, too.)

People start out by just looking (like we were freaks or something), then they begin to make remarks like, "That one has frizzier hair," or, "This one's nose is wider."

I hope your readers learned something when you told them never to compare one twin with the other. They might not realize it but they are adding fuel to a fire that is already too hot.—An Original, Not A Xerox

Dear Original: Now that the mother has heard from two identical twins (you and me), let's hope she gets the picture. If she doesn't, perhaps we've helped to enlighten other mothers who were doubly blessed.

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is being written by 10 students in the ninth grade of a school in Illinois.

A certain teacher has the habit of saying "at this point in time" whenever he opens his mouth. This phrase, as you know, came out of the Watergate hearings and we've all heard it so often we're ready to toss our cookies. It's like a jab in the ear with sharp stick. Please help us wise this teacher up without endangering our grades.—Plenty Anonymous

Dear Plenty: Mail this column to "Mr. Jab In The Ear," and I'll bet you'll notice a change. Some people are totally unaware of a repetitive speech pattern until it is brought to their attention.

New beef standards confuse shoppers

By GAYNOR MADDOX

Housewives are bewildered. The new Department of Agriculture grading standard for beef leaves them only the butcher and their own untrained eyes when they select a wrapped package of beef from the meat display. They want the best meat for their money so they bought Choice. Now, however, they learn that Choice includes from 10 to 30 per cent of what was formerly graded as good.

There are other considerations. The leaner young cattle are no longer required to show as much marbling (A sign of tenderness) as before. Agriculture officials expect this lowered demand for less marbling (little spots of fat threaded among the lean) will encourage cattlemen to raise less fat animals, those with a minimum of marbling. It takes less feed to bring them to a salable state, thus a saving to cattlemen. Nutritionists and some doctors believe less marbling will be more healthful for the cholesterol prone. According to experts, lowering age requirements for marketable beef will have little effect on eating quality.

Consumers and restaurant owners deny these claims. Restauranters say that widening U.S. Agriculture's Choice grade will prevent them from guaranteeing the flavor and tenderness of the beef they sell. Many housewives agree.

Consumers groups are pleading for a new standard, half way between the old Choice and the new Good. This new standard would cut the cost of the Choice and raise the price on the new Good.

So where does all this leave the woman standing at the meat counter at the supermarket? She wants the best she can get. But who will guide her?

One thing she might consider is the wisdom of trading regularly in the same store, with the same butcher. As a regular customer, he might give her his best beef. He knows.

The next best thing is to learn a few marketing guides. Our butcher, Edgar Friedman, noted for his judgment and devotion to top quality, gives this advice about selecting the best quality of beef:

The nutritive value of all cuts is the same. But the taste, texture and method of cooking differ. You don't want to pay more for a lesser quality, no matter what grade is stamped on it. Grain fed beef (Where the best beef comes from) is pinkish red and has fine marbling. White flaky fat surrounds it. Grass-fed beef, of which 30 per cent is now permitted to be graded not Good but Choice, is a dark red with practically no marbling and the fat is yellow-tinged. So study assiduously.

WEDDING AHEAD?

Instead of a traditional wedding gown, if you're planning a small, informal wedding, you'll look just as well in a crepe de chine ankle length shirtwaist or a gauzy caftan embroidered in white.

Attention! Prospective brides

Because of misunderstanding on wedding pictures, The Telegraph is asking prospective brides to arrange for good black-and-white wedding pictures for use with wedding stories.

Color photographs and black-and-white prints off a color negative are unsatisfactory for good newspaper reproduction.

Rather than be disappointed by having a picture rejected by the newspaper, we are advising brides to insist on a black-and-white picture shot with black-and-white film.

The Sassoons

The beauty business pays off

By ELLIE GROSSMAN
NEW YORK — (NEA) — Watch it. There goes another gibe camouflaged as a pleasantries. It's aimed by the young, darkly exquisite but unaccomplished American wife toward her older, much accomplished English husband. He, in turn, is protective and retaliatory.

When she says, "Sometimes I help promote a new salon or the company asks my opinion about something, not that my opinion means much," he jumps in with, "She has inherent good taste."

But later, when she's discussing life goals — "When you were a child, didn't you just know you'd end up looking a certain way . . ." he laughs and teases, "You like the way you look, do you? Come on, you know you do." And she's flustered.

It's the Sassoons, Beverly and Vidal. At 48, lean and charming, he's the proprietor of a worldwide web of hair salons that keeps him pinballing from America to Europe. In the last 17 days, for instance, he city-hopped through England before landing in New York to meet Beverly and start promoting their book, "A Year of Health and Beauty."

Beverly, meanwhile, taller and lankier, her short hair smoothed across her forehead to frame her dark, lemur eyes, had been at home in Beverly Hills, taking care of their four children. "There's a tremendous amount of pressure at home, much more than you get on a plane," she says laughing.

And two days a week, she trekked to Santa Monica Junior College where she's enrolled in a liberal arts program.

"I'm in my second year there. I dropped out of college when I went under contract to Columbia Pictures, and then I met Vidal and became a wife and mother. School is totally away from fashion and beauty — not that I don't love them, but in school you're quite anonymous. It's a treat to do something on my own and not be judged as anybody."

BEVERLY AND VIDAL Sassoon: exercise and health food ease pressures at home and in business.

They're both tired. It's mid-afternoon and they've already done two television shows and a couple of press interviews before this one, which is to be followed immediately with another.

Well, then, what of the book? "Simon and Schuster asked us to write it," Vidal says, "because we've been in the middle of so many related fields: hair, fashion, beauty and I've been going to health farms for 25 years." He's curled on the couch in their poorly heated Park Avenue hotel suite. "I introduced Beverly to health foods. In fact, I proposed to her on an English health farm. Is one in a health farm or on one?" he quips.

The salient message in the book, he says, is "energy level. We all have juices that we don't use because of lack of energy.

That's why we play up exercise and eating in the book; it's fuel for the body."

And that regimen of vitamins, vegetables, meditation and exercise, he says, "kept me away from the psychiatrist's couch all these years."

He grew up in London's East End. And for Jews in this slum ghetto, while Hitler festered across the Channel, "life was tough. You hated back. I'm convinced that roots are important — because my background gave me a very strong determination."

At 14, to learn a trade, he became a shampoo boy. "But I couldn't get a job in the West End because of my Cockney accent, so I too speech lessons to cure it."

At 20, the war just over, he joined a commando group in the Israeli underground in the Negev Desert. "It was quite illegal," he says, "so we went in two's and three's by way of Paris and Marseilles where we'd wait in a displaced persons' camp for a ship or a plane. That year in Israel was the best of my life because it was something I volunteered for and it gave me a great deal of pride which I'd never had before."

Beverly has left the room and returned with an American history book, part of her college reading. He turns to her. "What are you reading? You're in this interview, too, you know."

She looks up. "I wasn't around in the war," she says. "Yes," he muses, "you were two years old."

Let's see. It says in the book she practices yoga. How often? "I'll be honest," she says, smiling, "Vidal is the disciplined one in the family. Sometimes I'll do an hour and a half of yoga a day and then go two weeks without doing any. And occasionally I go crazy and have junk food with my kids."

No, she doesn't feel being married to Sassoon is a burden. "I'm much more secure now," she says, clutching her history book. "I don't feel like an accessory or an appendage to him."

"Did you know," he says, "I meditated at 4:30 this morning because I couldn't sleep? And then I did half an hour of exercise."

"I didn't know much of anything at 4:30," she says, then adds, laughing, "Yes, I heard you huffing and puffing."

The phone rings. It's the next interviewer. Later, when the note-takers are gone and the chilly hotel suite is quiet, what will they say to each other, the lovely young wife and the successful older husband? One wonders. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Squeeze of last resort

By Oswald & James Jacoby
South can count 13 easy tricks if hearts and diamonds both break 3-3. He can count 12 if either suit breaks. Suppose both suits are unkind enough to misbehave?

South can still make his contract if he can develop a squeeze. The squeeze will develop if one opponent stops both suits. It will fail miserably if each opponent has a red-suit stopper.

It will fail even more miserably if South wins the first club. South only has 11 winners and must lose the first in order to go through the process known as rectifying the count.

Any smart declarer is not going to worry about giving up an overtrick when the contract is a slam so South ducks the first club.

He wins the second and proceeds to run off four spades. Everyone is down to seven cards and poor East has to Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, after the British evacuation of Boston, General George Washington moved three of his regiments into the city to protect it and to guard the military stores abandoned by the British.

children CAN'T HELP WONDERING.

And they wonder a lot about God. They seem to have a natural awareness that He's here, and that He's important. But they want to know more. In the Christian Science Sunday School, God's nearness and goodness become practical realities to children. They study and discuss weekly Bible Lessons, and how to apply their truths each day. They learn to look to God for His unfailing help.

No need for your child to go on wondering. Let him start discovering, at our Sunday School. We'll be delighted to welcome him and his friends.

The driver of the second vehicle, Paul B. Straw, 31, Rt. 1, told police he had his turn signal on because he was changing lanes. He and two passengers in his car, Nelda Straw, 26, and Ann Straw, 2, were treated and released at KSB Hospital.

Former Nazi withdraws as Rotary nominee

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Former Nazi Wolfgang A. Wick has withdrawn his nomination for the 1977-78 presidency of Rotary International.

Wick's withdrawal was announced Friday by the current Rotary president, Ernesto Imbassahy De Mello of Brazil. It came on the heels of a series of protests within the worldwide service organization against his nomination.

De Mello said W. Jack Davis, a businessman from Bernuda, has been nominated in Wick's place.

The nomination of Wick, from Klagenfurt, Austria, by an 11-member Rotary nominating committee, triggered protests from Rotarians in Europe and Israel.

Wick, vice chairman of the board of directors of the Austro-American Magnesite Co. in Radenthein, Austria, declined the nomination for personal reasons after the initial protests but was selected again by the nominating committee. After his second nomination, Wick last week said he was determined to remain a candidate for the presidency.

Davis is a former vice president of Rotary International and has been a member of the Rotary Club of Hamilton since 1943.

Session on housing set

The Northwest Illinois Regional Council of Public Officials (Northwest Council) will sponsor a day-long conference on housing needs, trends and financing April 8 in the Rock Falls Community Youth Building.

The conference will bring together financial experts from the U.S. Department of Urban and Housing Department (HUD), Farmer's Home Administration and the Illinois Department of Local Government as well as local source persons.

Accused

OREGON — A rural Rochelle man was arrested on a charge of battery by Ogle County Sheriff's deputies early this morning following a disturbance at his home.

Deputies said that Margaret Woolbright, Rt. 3, called the Sheriff's department to report that her husband had struck her. When the deputies arrived at the scene, they found the woman had bruises and a cut on her leg. The Woolbright woman signed the complaint against her husband, Jimmy, 28.

Woolbright will appear in court April 9.

News of Wick's resignation and of Davis' nomination is being sent to the 16,705 Rotary Clubs worldwide.

Other candidates for the presidency may be nominated by any Rotary club filing a resolution with the general secretary of the association by April 16.

De Mello said less than 10 other nominees' names had been submitted by clubs.

The names of the nominees will be announced simultaneously to all Rotary clubs on a date not yet announced, he said, and the president will be elected by ballot at the international convention to be held June 13-17 in New Orleans.

Rotary International began in 1905 in Chicago and has about 775,000 business and professional men in some 150 countries and geographical regions.

Wick last week acknowledged that he was a Nazi party member and SS trooper, but told the Associated Press that his membership was "during the time it was legal (in Austria)." He has denied playing an important role in Nazi Austria.

Wick said Rotarians who opposed his nomination told him they did so "for formal reasons," not because they accused him of any personal guilt during the war.

"They said my membership alone in the N.S.D.A.P. (the Nazi party) and in the armed branch of the SS in the final weeks of the war were sufficient to oppose my candidacy," he said.

Steward School Board discusses cutbacks

STEWART — The Steward Elementary School Board discussed possible cutbacks in an effort to hold the line on expenditures for the 1976-77 school year budget in a meeting Thursday night.

The board said that inflation and factors such as decreasing state aid due to declining enrollment have created a difficult task of planning the educational program. The board concluded that budget cuts are necessary if the district plans to minimize debt limits. The decision involves whether the board should allow the debt to increase or cut back on the educational program and appointments. Further discussion is to be held at the next board meeting April 14.

The board authorized the issuing of $9,000 in tax anticipation warrants to meet current expenses.

In other action, the board authorized the implementation of a new telephone communication system, set the eighth grade graduation for May 28 and the eighth grade trip to Springfield for May 21, discussed the annual preschool registration scheduled for April 6 from 9 to 11 a.m. in the school cafeteria.

The board also agreed to participate in the annual fine arts festival to be held April 5 at the Creston Elementary School, authorized the superintendent to prepare proposals for purchasing new instructional materials and textbooks for the 1976-77 school term, to plan in-service workshops for the staff, and to begin plans for the summer maintenance program.

Wooden leg ruling by Scott

Mexican General Santa Anna's wooden leg is the subject of a legal opinion rendered by Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott.

Illinois Adjutant Gen. Harold R. Patton asked Scott if state law permitted lending the leg to the National Guard Heritage Gallery in Washington, D.C., for a Bicentennial celebration.

In his reply to Patton, Scott noted that Illinois law prohibits the Adjutant General from loaning the colors, flags, guidons and trophies of war belonging to the state. Scott's letter advised that Patton will have to determine for himself whether or not the leg is a trophy of war.

The general's wooden leg was captured by members of the Third Regiment, Illinois Volunteers at the Battle of Cerro Gordo on April 18, 1847, during the Mexican War.

Either Indiana or Marquette to bow out tonight

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

They had won 56 of 57 games since the college basketball season began so many months ago. They had reached the top two rungs in the national ladder.

Yet one team—No. 1 Indiana or No. 2 Marquette—was to be left behind at Baton Rouge Saturday, the final victim of a Midwest regional playoff that also had claimed sixth-ranked Alabama, eighth-ranked North Carolina, 10th-rated Western Michigan and St. John's.

"I think they should have a way to seed eight teams and place two of them in each regional," offered Indiana Coach Bobby Knight before his Hoosiers placed on the line their undefeated season, their top billing in the rankings and their challenge to UCLA's NCAA basketball crown.

There were other problems to be faced in the three other cities which would host their own judgement days: fourth-ranked Rutgers, 30-0, met surprising Virginia Military, 22-9, at Greensboro, N.C.; No. 14 Missouri, 26-4, faced No. 9 Michigan, 23-6, at Louisville; and at Los Angeles, defending champ UCLA, fifth-ranked, 25-4, risked its title against hard-nosed No. 15 Arizona, 24-8.

Neither Knight nor Marquette's Al McGuire regretted the fact that the matchup of their teams had to happen in the semifinals. McGuire, in fact, thought his 27-1 Warriors might have the advantage in a pressure game of this kind.

"When it gets to be a tight situation at the end of a game, a 'white knucker,' the tendency is for the better team to tighten up and the weaker gets

NIT finals likened to 'family affair'

NEW YORK (AP) — "This game is like a family affair," said Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall, contemplating Sunday's final of the National Invitation Tournament against North Carolina-Charlotte. "We're pretty much in-bred—there's a lot of Kentucky in both these teams."

A lot of Kentucky in North Carolina-Charlotte? You bet. Lee Rose, coach of the 49ers, spent seven years coaching at Transylvania, a college division school in Lexington, Ky., which just happens to be where the University of Kentucky is located. Mike Pratt, Rose's assistant, played at Kentucky under Coach Adolph Rupp.

"We're close, very close," said Rose at a news conference Friday. "Joe Hall and I are both a couple of farm boys. We've known each other for many years now. We worked in the same area, we recruited the same kids—there's a lot between us."

Matter of fact, Rose has as much Kentucky in him as any coach.

"As a kid I used to sell soda during Kentucky games at the Coliseum," said Rose. "There were times I used to sneak in just to see the great Wildcats play under Coach Rupp. I'd hang from the rafters just to see them play."

For the past 11 years, Rose and Hall have been members of the Crestwood Christian Church in Lexington, Ky.

"I'm on the fund-raising committee," said Rose, "and he (Hall) hasn't paid his dues. I wonder who David Blondell, our minister, is going to be praying for?"

"I got to him first," countered Hall. "He's our team chap-strong," he said.

Knight, coach of a 29-0 team that has won 63 of its last 64 games, shrugged off the pressure as "largely a figment of the imaginations of sports writers. I don't think it means anything."

Nearly 100 young basketball players in four cities today might have disputed Knight's thinking. And don't leave out the thousands of fans, who swelled four coliseums to capacity and tuned in millions of television sets.

Another road trip awaited the victor of the Indiana-Marquette clash: to Philadelphia to meet the winner of the Arizona-UCLA game.

That contest took a strange turn since the Bruins, who seek their 11th championship in 13 years and their first under Coach Gene Bartow, were the visiting team in the Pauley Pavilion they usually call home. Bartow, joking before the game, said "we have shown more consistency on the road."

The road to the East final was a tough one for underdog Virginia Military, which hoped for yet another upset against unbeaten Rutgers. "We're here," said VMI Coach Bill Blair. "Don't ask me how, but we're here."

Michigan's Rickey Green planned to come out shooting against Missouri, since 16 of his 20 points Thursday night came in the second half. "I didn't take my usual shots early," he recalled. "I thought about it at halftime and started driving after that."

He'd had plenty of time to think by gametime Saturday. So had everybody else.

lain. He eats breakfast with the team before all our games. He's flying down here for the final—at my request."

Sunday's final matches one of the most prestigious names in college basketball, Kentucky, against a growing school hungry for recognition. "With all the ACC schools around us," said Rose, "we don't get much ink. We're trying to build our program, and being here in the finals of the NIT against a team like Kentucky is just great. Win or lose, we're winners already just being here."

Both clubs won one-point thrillers in Thursday's semifinals. Kentucky edged Providence 79-78 on Larry Johnson's court-length drive and layup with one second to go, while UNC-Charlotte beat North Carolina State 80-79 on Melvin Watkins' basket with 30 seconds left.

To beat Kentucky, UNC-Charlotte, 24-5, will need another big game from Cedric Maxwell, the 6-foot-8 center who has averaged 28.3 points and 10.2 rebounds in three NIT starts. His 39 free throws—in 43 attempts—are already a tournament record, and he also had blocked eight shots, stole the ball seven times and handed out nine assists.

But he'll have his hands full when he goes against burly 6-11 center Mike Phillips of Kentucky, 19-10. Despite a sprained ankle, Phillips has been a dominating player under the boards.

"There's no way I can out-muscle him," said Maxwell of the key matchup. "I'll just have to use whatever speed I've got and try to out-hustle him."

Oak Park lucky to survive bad game, says Coach Meyer

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Coach Tom Meyer says his Oak Park team is lucky to be in the scrap for the Class AA state Illinois High School Association championship.

"It's nice to still be in the tournament after playing that bad," Meyer said Friday after his Huskies won an overtime quarterfinal victory over Loyola of Wilmette by a 56-53 margin.

The win put Oak Park, 27-4, in the semifinals today against Chicago Morgan Park, 26-5.

A second semifinal matchup will pit Aurora West, 29-2, against Decatur Eisenhower, 25-4.

"I thought we had out ball game won six or seven times, but Loyola kept coming back," Meyer said.

"We played terribly. My kids were very, very tight. You come down here and have 16,000 people watching you play. I think our kids are going to be a bit more relaxed tomorrow, though," Meyer said.

He said Loyola played good defensive basketball.

"They don't try for the steal. They play good fundamental defense. They don't take chances," Meyer said.

Loyola Coach William Gleason said his team got in foul trouble early and he was disappointed that they were unable to shoot when they had the basketball with about 40 seconds left in the game.

"We had told them to get into a good offensive position and if we ran into difficulty, we would call time out. We never got a chance to call time out," he said.

The regular game ended in a 45-45 tie.

"We should have got a last shot off. It didn't make any difference if it went in or not," Gleason said.

Oak Park's prime concern against Morgan Park will be to stop 6-foot-5 center Levi Cobb, who had 26 points in a squeaker 53-48 Morgan Park win over Galesburg earlier Friday. More than half Cobb's points came in the final four minutes of play.

"If we don't stop Levi in the clutch, we'll be in trouble," Meyer said.

Morgan Park Coach Bill Warden said Cobb "was the key for us late in the game" and said it wasn't one of the all-stater's better games.

Decatur Eisenhower and Aurora West had much easier times of it in Friday's quarter-final games.

Decatur Eisenhower center Jeff Roth had 27 points, 18 rebounds and nine assists to lead his team to a 81-66 win over Marion.

"Roth was fabulous. He was going after the loose ball, blocking shots...but he's out there with the men tomorrow, though," Eisenhower Coach Bob Witt said Friday.

Marion had a team packed with juniors while Aurora West has a bigger, more muscular and disciplined group.

"When we can get people to run up and down the floor with us, that's just the game we like to play," Witt said.

He said he won't change Eisenhower's running style against Aurora West.

"They may blow us out. We may blow them out. When you get down to the last game of the season, who cares?" he asked jokingly.

Coach John McDougal of Aurora West said he was "elated at the way our team played at both ends of the floor" in a 30-point, 82-52 win over Thornridge.

His teams pride themselves on defensive ability.

All five Aurora West starters scored in double figures, led by 22 points from forward Ron Hicks. McDougal says forward Jay Bryant, who had 17 points, five rebounds and seven assists is the "unsung hero" of the team, getting the ball through the defense and feeding it to Hicks and center Bruce Johnson, who had 15 points and 13 rebounds.

The Worry Clinic

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE
CASE G-636: Jenny R., aged 19, teaches a Bible Class in a Presbyterian Church.

"Dr. Crane," she began, "I'm puzzled by the lack of faith shown by the 12 spies who were sent into the Promised Land."

"When they returned, only Caleb and Joshua urged an immediate invasion. 'The other 10 were cowardly, saying the Hebrews were grossly outnumbered, and the inhabitants were as grasshoppers in multitude and possessed walled cities, plus horsemen and chariots.'"

"So God punished them by making them mill around in the Wilderness another 40 years. 'Was that to wait till the cowards died off?'"

Caleb and Joshua
Even after those 40 years of wandering, the people were ready to stampede again into a panic.

But Caleb probably felt he couldn't wait an additional 40 years for another generation of the chickenhearted to die off!

So Caleb bravely requested that he be given the land that was inhabited by the most fearsome of the native inhabitants, namely, the giants!

Caleb's bold request was doubtless a deliberately planned strategy, hatched up by Caleb and Joshua, to prevent wasting another 40 years going around in futile circles in the Wilderness!

Most people, then and now, act like two-legged sheep. That's why so few Americans go to the rescue of a person being attacked by a rapist or robber.

"I don't want to get involved," is the standard trademark of a chickenhearted American.

Millions of you saw that five-part documentary TV film describing how Moses led the Israelites out of Egyptian bondage.

Despite the fact Moses had brought the Hebrews out of 400 years of Egyptian slavery, they revolted against him because they had to tighten their belts.

They preferred a return to slavery amid the fleshpots of Egypt!

A pet canary was once let out of its cage by a sympathetic teenager who felt the bird would relish the greater freedom of flying around the spacious living room.

But when the doorbell rang, and several high schoolers rushed in, noisy and chattering, the little canary flew back to the cage and kept beating its head against the wires trying to get back inside.

For it craved the safety of its former prison!

For freedom demands courage and self-reliance!

If a Russian dictator should attempt to take over our Republic how many Americans would fight to the death as did the Alamo Freedom fighters?

Send for my booklet "How To Stimulate Bible Reading," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents. (Always write to Dr. Crane, Hopkins Bldg., Melott, Ind. 47958, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs, when you send for one of his booklets.)

Coffee-heart attack link is discounted

BOSTON (AP) — A four-year-old study that linked coffee-drinking with heart attacks has been discounted by a new one.

In the study published today in the New England Journal of Medicine, a team of Boston doctors says, "The risks, if any ... appear small."

Four years ago, the Boston Collaborative Drug Surveillance Program at Boston University said the risk of acute myocardial infarction — the heart damage that results from a blocked artery — was increased 60 per cent for those who drank one to five cups of coffee each day and 120 per cent for those who drank more than six cups.

The National Coffee Association says that during last winter the average American drank 2.2 cups of coffee per day.

The business side of the news

30th anniversary for Hank Henry's Men's Shop

Hank Henry's Men's Shop, 221 W. First St., is observing its 30th year in Dixon this week. Partners in the business shown above are, left to right, Everett Kraft, Karl Striffler and Hank Henry.

The business got its start at 109 S. Galena Avenue when Hank Henry and Isadore Eichler formed a partnership and opened for business on March 19, 1946. Following Eichler's death in 1948, his wife assumed his share of the business and was Henry's partner until 1955. At that time Bill O'Malley purchased Mrs. Eichler's interest and continued as a partner until 1958 when he moved to Arizona.

Everett Kraft started as an employee in 1959 and became a partner in 1967 at which time the business was moved to its present location. The new store was five times larger than when on Galena Avenue.

Karl Striffler, who had operated a tailor shop in Dixon for 15 years, bought into the business in 1971.

Doll show at CNB

In a year when events marking the nation's Bicentennial are occurring with increasing frequency, the City National Bank and Trust Company in Dixon is currently sponsoring one of the most beautiful and unique.

Next week the City National is inviting the public in to see the "Best of the Bicentennial" dolls, 30 prize-winning dolls including the grand prize winner, selected from entries in a nationwide contest.

The striking display stems from the annual Dress-A-Doll program, sponsored each year by financial institutions, including City National. Dolls are given to the public to dress in a variety of costumes. For ultimate distribution to needy children. At Christmas, 1975, more than 25,000 dolls were distributed in this way.

The 1975 contest, in preparation for the nation's birthday celebration, included a Bicentennial category and each sponsoring institution was invited to enter its Bicentennial winners in a contest to select the very finest. More than 200 dolls were entered.

A best of show doll is Daniel Boone, resplendent in fringed buckskin, con skin hat, holding a bird he has just shot with his trusty brass-trimmed musket. A leather bag holding shot and gunpowder horn hang from his waist. Judges sought in vain to estimate the hours that went into planning and sewing the costume.

Dixon is one of 200 stops on a tour that will take the dolls around the country during 1976. The display continues at City National through March 26. When the four traveling displays have made all stops, the prize winners (12 in all), will be given to the National Historical Society in Washington for permanent displaying as part of the Nation's Bicentennial Exhibit.

ComEd sees area growth

Industrial growth rates for the Rock River Valley area served by Commonwealth Edison Company during 1975 were generally slower than comparable 1974 growth rates, according to Arthur Moore, vice president of the utility's Rock River division.

However, he was optimistic about future growth possibilities. He said many firms citing needs for abundant and economical energy supplies have been looking to the northern Illinois region served by Edison for possible future development.

Edison's Rock River division extends from the Wisconsin State Line south through the Mendota area between Illinois Rte. 47 and the Mississippi River at Fulton.

Moore explained that although there was a four per cent gain in employment growth rates compared to the 1974 pace, only two-thirds as many firms participated in expansion activities, resulting in a 66 per cent slowdown in the industrial floor space occupation rate.

Citing figures supplied by the utility's Marketing Development department, which promotes new industry activity throughout Edison's 25-county northern Illinois service area, Moore said there were increases in the number of available industrial sites, acreage and buildings in this area, compared to the 1974 year-end figures.

"At the close of 1975 there were 105 available industrial sites covering nearly 11,000 acres and 37 vacant industrial buildings with about 2.4 million square feet of floor space.

"This compares with corresponding 1974 year-end figures showing 98 industrial sites covering nearly 9,700 acres and 26 vacant industrial buildings with an aggregate of about 1.8 million square feet."

More than 56 billion kilowatt-hours were used by Edison customers in 1975, according to Moore, who said that more than one-third of the company's output came from its nuclear generating stations. He also said that Edison expects to produce about half its power from nuclear fuels by the mid-1980's. "At present," he continued, "90 per cent of Edison's power is generated from coal and nuclear fuels."

"Our $4.6 billion construction program for the next five years is planned to give us a generating reserve margin in the general range of 14 to 18 per cent for the summer peak periods of 1980 through 1985," he said.

Edison's Marketing Development department has promoted commercial and industrial growth throughout its service territory since 1925, according to Moore. The department has up to date listings covering over 1,100 available industrial sites consisting of about 75,000 acres and 800 vacant buildings with over 55 million square feet.

"We have about 50 maps — some of which cover entire walls — containing detailed site location data and economic information, as well as over 6,000 slides showing available industrial sites," Moore said.

Edison's Marketing Development department offers its services free of charge and on a confidential basis to firms considering expansion or relocation to the Chicago and northern Illinois area served by the utility.

EMPLOYEE RETIRES—Helen McIntyre, 203 1/2 Monroe Ave., Dixon, will retire from Commonwealth Edison Company following a 39-year career. Her entire career had been spent in the Dixon area, currently in the general service department. Miss McIntyre attends St. Patrick's Church. Her favorite hobby is embroidery. She will retain her Dixon home.
